Wilson Bares Move To Share A-Secrets

Defense Secretary Quotes Eisenhower As Wanting To Have McMahon Act Amended

Paris (AP)—Secretary of Defense Wilson said yesterday the Eisenhower administration wants the McMahon Act amended so the Atlantic Allies may share in some American secrets on atomic defense. And he left open the possibility they may share also in atomic weapons from the growing U. S. arsenal.

The secretary spoke before the North Atlantic Treaty Organization Council. Officials who attended the session said Wilson reported President Eisenhower wanted Congress to permit the Pentagon to share "pertinent information" on atomic weapons with the Allies in the near future.

His statement came as the foreign, defense and finance ministers of the 14-nation alliance approved a 25 per cent increase in NATO strength in the coming year, with a five per cent boost in ground forces and a 15 per cent increase in naval forces.

Any move by Washington to share its knowledge on the use of atomic weapons would require an amendment to the McMahon Act, which confines U. S. atomic knowledge to American officials.

In Washington, the White House had no comment on Wilson's statement. Press Secretary James C. Hagerty said news reports were the first word he had of the proposal Wilson mentioned.

By account of the NATO officials:

Wilson said the executive branch of the U. S. government is prepared to ask Congress for such an amendment. Wilson was speaking of knowledge on how to use atomic weapons rather than the sharing of these weapons themselves, but did not exclude the possibility of shipping actual bombs and shells to forces in Europe.

The secretary coupled this pledge with assurances that the United States—again subject to congressional approval—will continue to contribute munitions and technical training in the use of new weapons for the modernization of NATO forces.

Pointing out this could have a great impact on NATO plans, he urged military leaders promptly to devise procedures for the employment of new weapons and new capabilities.

McCarthy Says Job Not To Prove Spying

New York (AP)—Sen. Joseph R. McCarthy (R-Wis.) said yesterday it isn't his job to prove espionage, but merely to alert security officers to it.

And he added that he thinks his Senate Permanent Investigations Subcommittee has done just that in its investigation of Ft. Monmouth, N. J., and private defense plants.

"More and more, they are doing something about it," said the Wisconsin Republican.

"Up to the first of this year there was practically no concern for the security of our secrets," McCarthy spoke up at the outset of another open hearing into the security situation at Ft. Monmouth, Signal Corps headquarters of the nation's top secret radar defense planning.

Four more witnesses took refuge behind the Fifth Amendment, rather than risk self-incrimination.

Fire Occurs On Rose St.

A chimney fire caused an alarm last night at 17 Rose St., East Stroudsburg.

The fire was extinguished by Acme Hose Co. before it emerged or fired any other part of the structure, said Frank H. Johns, resident there.

There was considerable water damage, Johns said. The water came down the chimney and out through a vent in the bathroom, and out at the bottom of the stove.

A neighbor spotted the flames coming out of the Johns chimney and turned in the alarm about 8:10 p. m.

To Work On Message

Washington (AP)—The White House said yesterday President Eisenhower will fly to Augusta, Ga., on Christmas Day or the next day and spend part of the yuletide working on the annual State of the Union message he will deliver to Congress in January.

River Water Bill Praised In New Jersey

Trenton, N. J., (AP)—A joint legislative committee heard nothing but praise yesterday for a compromise bill that seeks to adjust differences on diversion of Delaware River water between New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania.

The committee, headed by State Sen. Alfred B. Littell (R-Sussex) who sponsored the bill, conducted a public hearing on the measure which is now before a special session of the New Jersey Legislature.

State officials and legal experts who have been working on the water supply problem for a number of years told the committee passage of the Littell bill was markedly in New Jersey's favor.

The bill would settle litigation now before the U. S. Supreme Court. In a 1931 decree, the court permitted New York to take 440 million gallons of water daily from the Delaware River. New York has applied for an additional 360 million gallons daily.

New Jersey and Pennsylvania opposed New York's application on the general grounds it provided no safeguard for their water supply interests.

Experts from the three states got together and worked out a compromise to avoid an expensive suit, which it is estimated would cost New Jersey at least $300,000 with no guarantee of a favorable decision.

Former State Sen. Oscar Wilemsky (R-Passaic), an attorney representing New Jersey in the negotiations, told the committee the Littell bill must be passed by the special session if the court proceedings are to be avoided.

The bill has these main provisions:

One. New Jersey and Pennsylvania will withdraw their opposition to the New York application to take 800 million gallons of water a day from the river and store it in three reservoirs. One of these at Cannonsville on the west branch of the Delaware—is not yet constructed.

Two. In return, New York will maintain a flow in the river past Montague, seven miles below Port Jervis, of at least 980 million gallons a day from the two reservoirs ready for use and of at least one billion, 130 million gallons a day after the Cannonsville dam is completed. Under the 1931 Supreme Court decree, New York is required only to maintain a minimum flow of 200 million gallons a day. Under the new plan New York will be holding 700 billion gallons of water in the three reservoirs ready to replenish the river during drought seasons.

Three—New Jersey would be able to take 100 million gallons a day from the river without being required to build a reservoir to compensate for the diversion. Most of this would be diverted through the Delaware and Raritan Canal, which within a couple of years will have a top capacity of 75 million gallons daily. The canal carried 30 million gallons daily to New Jersey during the worst part of this summer's drought.

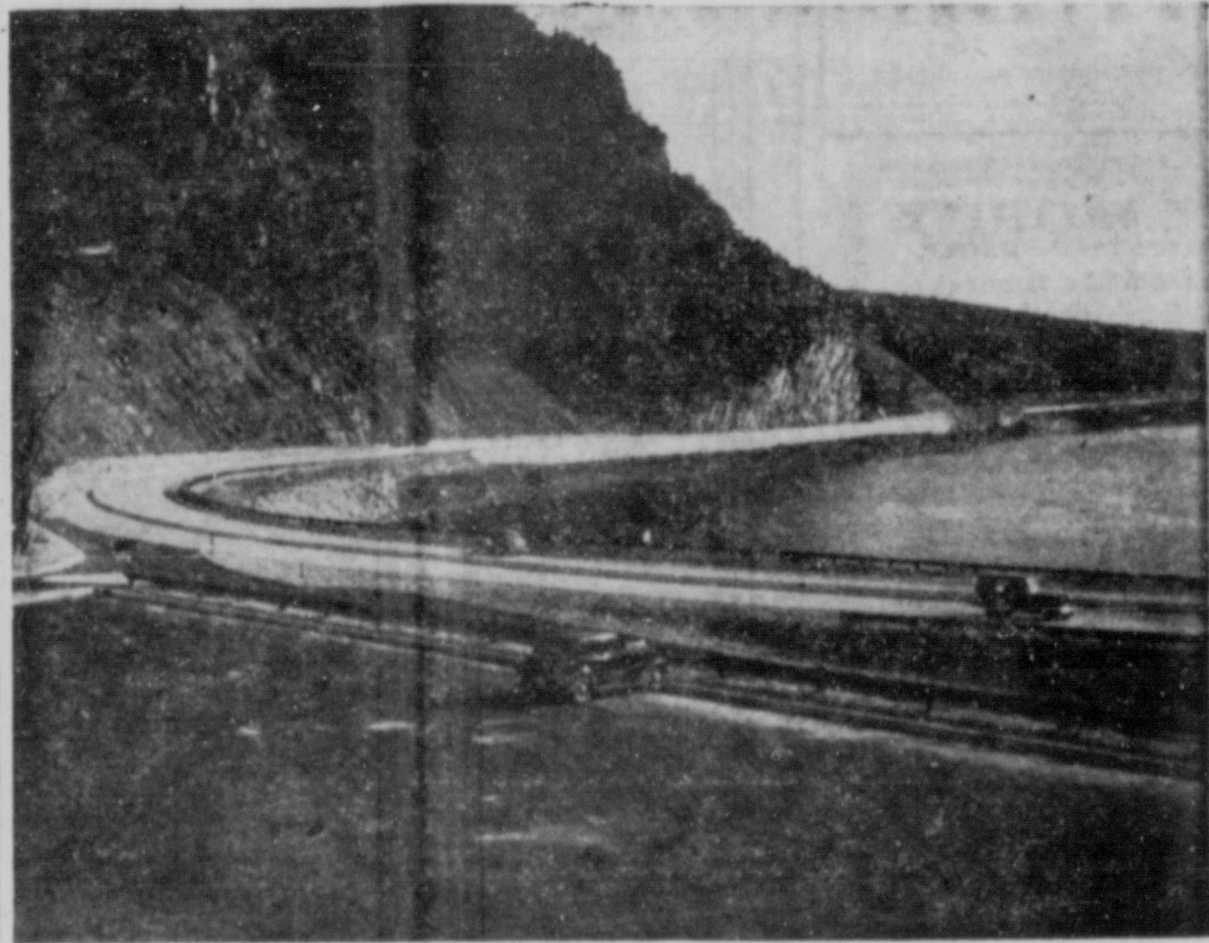

Four—Pennsylvania may build a dam and compensating reservoir at Wallkill Bend, Bushkill, opposite Sussex County, N. J. Sussex County is guaranteed a water supply of 25 million gallons daily from this reservoir at cost. New Jersey has the option of participating in the yield of the project up to 30 percent by paying a proportionate share of the cost of the dam after construction has been completed. The Supreme Court must decide just how much water may be taken from the river at this point and how much compensating flow taken from the reservoir during dry spells. Pennsylvania also may build a diversion dam at Brookville or Yardley, Pa.

accidents in Pennsylvania hunting history but we do know that it is one of the largest numbers recorded in several years," a commission spokesman said.

Ten fatal gunshot accidents were reported during the 12-day buck deer season this year as compared to five for the same season last year.

There were 446 non-fatal gunshot accidents in 1953 as compared with 362 for 1952. However, all the accident reports for 1953 have not yet been turned in and the total might be considerably higher, the spokesman said.

Meanwhile, the commission said the season closed on a good note with a great number of the state's 103,000 licensed antlerless deer hunters taking to the field in

YOU CAN STOP AND PARK, TOO. When motorists begin crossing the new bridge at Delaware Water today, they'll find the designers of the new bridge and highway system have added one thoughtful convenience for sightseers. On the New Jersey side of the bridge, near ramps leading on and off the highway, engineers have built a parking lot designed to give the best possible view of the Point of the Gap from that angle. This photo, taken by Thomas Knepp, 706 Scott St., Stroudsburg, shows location of the parking lot, looking directly between the Jersey and Pennsylvania banks. Photo shows deep cut made in the Jersey ledge, center background. Famed "Indian Head" is not visible in photo; lies on other side of steep "bluff" in center. (Photo by Knepp)

Last Chance Fades For 22 American POWs To Return

Panmunjon, Wednesday, (AP)—The last faint chance that 22 American war prisoners who stayed with the Communists would appear before U. S. explainers was virtually dispelled today by the head of the Neutral Nation Repatriation Commission.

Lt. Gen. K. S. Thimayya of India, the repatriation chairman, said in his opinion the Americans had "firm political convictions" and could not be wooed home by explanations, letters, nor appeals to their patriotism.

Sales Levy Take Set At $8 Million

Harrisburg (AP)—The State Revenue Department yesterday reported sales tax collections totaling $8,356,858 during the first two months of the state-wide levy.

Revenue Secretary Otto F. Messner said the total came from 150,000 returns processed from Sept. 1 when the 1 per cent tax became effective, until the close of business Monday.

Messner emphasized that the collections can "by no means be taken as a criterion of a full quarterly yield."

He explained that there is no complete return yet on collections by some large business establishments and corporations whose accounting systems differ from those of businesses of lesser size.

At the time of enactment of the sales levy by the 1953 General Assembly, it was estimated that the levy would yield 135 million dollars in the current biennial period.

At that rate the first two months could be expected to yield nearly 13 million dollars.

quest of game yesterday.

"Heavy snows fell in some western sections of the state and in other areas yesterday, making game tracking much easier," Dr. Bennett said. "This probably will bring the total kill for the special season up to a reasonably high figure."

Last year, during a three-day antlerless deer season, 37,829 kills were reported but commission estimates put the kill at about 54,800 because many hunters do not report their kills as requested by the commission.

"We expect the kill of antlerless deer this year to be much lower because there were twice as many licensed hunters last year and there was an extra day," Dr. Bennett said.

Dean Heads Home Amid Red Blasts

Tokyo, Wednesday, (AP)—U. S. envoy Arthur Dean heads back to Washington today amid angry broadcasts from Peiping charging him with "wrecking" plans for a Korean peace conference.

Dean's chief aide remained in Korea awaiting the possibility of a Communist apology for accusing the United States of perfidy. It was this Red charge that prompted Dean to break off preliminary talks.

Dean, who spent seven weeks in fruitless sessions with the Reds at Panmunjon, turned down a Communist demand to resume the talks yesterday.

The special envoy told a final news conference he believed the Communists eventually might "retract their insult" permitting the talks to be resumed, adding:

"But that Red move probably will not come until they feel it is to their advantage."

Kenneth Young, U. S. State Department Far East expert and Dean's chief assistant at the talks, will wait in Korea for the Red retraction—if it comes within "a reasonable time," Dean said.

However, the Peiping radio, gave no hint that an apology was being considered. Instead, the Reds repeated the charge.

49-Point Buck Killed; Looks Like Brush Pile

Holidaysburg (AP)—Kenneth Ruttler of nearby East Freedom is holding open house this week to give anyone who wants a chance to see the deer he bagged. It has 49 points.

Ruttler shot the 148-pound buck Saturday just a half-hour before Pennsylvania's buck deer season closed. It was his first kill in eight years.

Ruttler's description of the big antler which has points ranging from one-half to 11 inches, is: "It looks like a brush pile and almost scares you to look at it."

Fine, Driscoll To Take Part In Ceremony At Water Gap And Dinner In Stroudsburg

Weather condition will play no role in today's official opening of the new $8,500,000 Delaware Water Gap toll bridge, although officials of the Delaware River Joint Toll Bridge Commission are keeping their fingers crossed for an auspicious atmosphere.

Alexander R. Miller, chairman of the commission told The Daily Record yesterday the opening will go as scheduled, regardless of weather.

He also confirmed that both Gov. John S. Fine of Pennsylvania and Gov. Alfred E. Driscoll of New Jersey will be on hand for the ceremonies at 3 p. m. and the culminating dedicatory dinner in the Penn Stroud Hotel at 6:30.

Traditional ribbon cutting is slated for the middle of the huge structure which links the shores of Pennsylvania and New Jersey, giving the Gap region its first major bridge in history.

Robert B. Meyner, New Jersey governor-elect also has been invited to the ceremonies along with Edward L. Schmidt, Pennsylvania highways secretary; Randolph J. Abbott, commissioner of New Jersey's Highway Department; Charles H. Buckius, chief engineer for the Pennsylvania Highway Department; Edward W. Kilpatrick, New Jersey's chief engineer; Major H. H. Allen of J. E. Greiner Co., consulting engineers and William H. Wilson, chief engineer for the commission.

Miller will preside at the exercises. Rev. Luther Markin, pastor of Delaware Water Gap Presbyterian Church will offer invocation and Rt. Rev. Msgr. G. A. McHugh of Mount Pocono will give benediction.

An automobile procession will take visitors and participants as power shovels, contractors' equipment, machinery and tractors and semi-trailers carrying heavy loads will be based on total tonnage, plus a fee of $1 for inspection before toll determination.

Charges for all traffic movements requiring highway department permits for operating in Pennsylvania and New Jersey will be based on 10 cents a ton up to and including 20 tons, and 20 cents a ton for each ton over 20, gross weight.

The bridge is expected to play a major role in any future movement of military equipment, and is being considered as the arterial link for turnpike extensions in both states.

The largest of three bridges built in this vicinity by the Delaware River Joint Toll Bridge Commission at an overall cost of $15,000,000, the Gap structure spans the river 2,431 feet. It is the second toll structure near here to open to traffic. Portland's 1,300-foot bridge was opened Dec. 1 and the Milford-Montague span will be dedicated Dec. 30.

Maurice Bogart, of Bethlehem, will supervise the bridge operation from the administration building located on the Pennsylvania shore. Eight lanes of traffic are provided for the northern approach for a distance of 300 feet, including seven toll booths.

History of river crossings at Delaware Water Gap shows a ferry was operated by Jacob Decker and son between Dunfield, N. J., and Smithfield Township many years ago. Later it was taken over by John Zimmerman before a highway through the gap on the Pennsylvania side was built.

About 1798 Anthony Dutot, founder of Delaware Water Gap, originally called Dutotsburg, built a trail through the Gap which was later widened and functioned as a toll road in 1800.

Delaware, Lackawanna and Western Railroad built its tracks through the section about 1853 and Dutot's original road was changed to the present highway location. Records indicate the ferry operation was abandoned about 1888.

North of the Gap, and above the old New York, Susquehanna and Western Railroad bridge, records list a private ferry started about 1882 by Adam Transue. At one time the ferry was operated by Karamac Hotel Company.

The Shawnee Ferry was started around 1760. Known as Old Shoe-maker's Ferry and later as Brotzman's Ferry, it was operated by Charles Walker in later years. In 1903 Charles Worthington took over and used the ferry as a private crossing between states.

Dakota Woman Wins Contest

New York (AP)—A South Dakota housewife yesterday won $25,000 for the tastiest layer cake she baked.

She is Mrs. Bernard Kanagay of Webster, S. D., the wife of a painter-power hanger and the mother of two grown children.

One of the 100 finalists who went to New York to demonstrate their cooking ability in a "bake-off" was Mrs. Arthur George, of Stroudsburg RD33.

All hosts are scheduled to meet their guests at the train depot, Mrs. Wilson said.

The children will end their Christmas vacation in Monroe County on Wednesday, Dec. 30 when they leave on the 4:35 p. m. train, Mrs. Wilson announced.

Seven Fresh Air Children Returning Here For Holiday

Seven New York City boys and girls will arrive here Thursday for a return visit to the Poconos after spending their "Fresh Air" Summer vacation with local families.

According to Mrs. John Wilson, chairman of the local Fresh Air group, the children will arrive on the 12:26 p. m. DL&W train on Thursday.

Lions Report On Parking Meter Project

Stroudsburg Lions, meeting last night in the Penn-Stroud ballroom, checked up on matters connected with the club's Christmas activities; received reports on the proposal to pay fines of out-of-state motorists in cases of parking violations; and heard an address by Earl F. Groner, superintendent of Stroudsburg schools on the American Bill of Rights.

President William Hinton called a meeting of the board of directors after the regular session to consider matters of attendance.

The president explained the status of the parking meter proposal, saying that the innovation has been approved by the East Stroudsburg borough government and will go in effect there in January. In Stroudsburg, council had referred the matter to the chief burgess, who had declined to approve it.

Some members thought that it still remained a matter of legislation and therefore within the province of council. This interpretation is that, while the handling of the police department is the duty of the burgess, council can insist on its legislation being implemented. The matter was left in abeyance for the present.

The president, indicating that good publicity comes to communities through cancelling parking meter regulations for the holidays, told of publicity in the New York Times and Philadelphia Inquirer, telling of such action by a small New York community and strongly approving the idea.

Robert Haigh, speaking for the Christmas toy committee, said that the number of applications is somewhat smaller than in previous years as of this date and he was apprehensive lest there be a grand rush of applications after the boxes of toys have been packed. He said any person intending to make application should do so now, stating the number of children affected, the sex and age of each one.

He added that the packing of toys will be done at the Municipal Building on Sunday, Dec. 20, at 2 p.m., and he urged all members who can help out to do so.

Emerson Rahn reported on the Christmas party next Tuesday when the Lions may invite their wives and children and other children known to them in their neighborhoods. He urged all the members to inform him as to the number of guests.

Each Lion inviting a child must provide a gift for such little guest but is barred from spending more than a dollar for the same.

A juvenile entertainment is planned and Santa Claus will distribute the gifts.

James Somers, who had charge of the recent attendance contest, said that the penalty dinner will be held after Jan. 1.

Joseph Ciampi, program chairman, introduced Scholastic Superintendent Groner, guest speaker.

Groner paid a deep tribute to the American Constitution as protector of the rights of the people and said that these were specifically protected by the Bill of Rights, the 162nd anniversary of the adoption of which is now being observed.

He said that this great document was not figured out, as if by magic, by the American founding fathers, but that there was inspiration in the growth of law through the past, and cited the regulations of Moses, the codes of the Greeks and Romans and the British Magna Charta.

He explained that the Bill of Rights, the first amendments to the Constitution, was designed to protect the common man in his dearest possessions and to calm his fears. He added that in modern times, fears have again arisen and that these were, in large measure, met by the Four Freedoms of the Atlantic Conference, namely, freedom from fear and from want, and freedom of worship and of expression.

He said he felt that times such as these should often make a citizen check up on the character of his own citizenship.

Children's Clothing, Inc., Reports $490 Subscriptions In Campaign To Raise $2,000

Nearly 25 percent of the $2,000 needed by Monroe County Children's Clothing Inc., a non-profit corporation set up to aid underprivileged children of the area, has been received in the campaign launched last week.

Arlington Williams, treasurer, disclosed yesterday that $490 had been forwarded him for application to the purchase of new clothing.

Although the group functions 12 months a year aiding needy children, emphasis at present is on the approaching cold weather season when youngsters need warm clothing more than ever.

Letters continue to reach the corporation's secretary, Mrs. Helen Minnich, daily appealing for clothing for youngsters. School nurses make regular reports to Mrs. Minnich, citing families of the county who need this clothing assistance.

Leaders of the campaign have announced they need funds and not clothing. Arrangements were set up several years ago to buy new wearing apparel at greatly reduced prices, giving the organization access to quality garments at minimum rates.

Contributions may be sent Arlington Williams, 28 No. Seventh St., Stroudsburg.

Metropolitan Edison Co. Files Request For Tariff Revision With State PUC

Metropolitan Edison Co. yesterday filed with the Pennsylvania Public Utility Commission a new tariff adjusting its rates to "better reflect the cost of furnishing service to customers."

Schedule to become effective Feb. 15, 1954, these changes will slightly reduce the company's total revenue, the utility said.

Under the new rate, which must have PUC approval before it becomes effective, monthly charges to residential customers will be increased a maximum of 17 cents per month.

In all cases the monthly minimum bill will be $1 instead of 75 cents. Those having electric water heating service will receive an additional increase equivalent to one-half cent per gallon of tank capacity per month; for example, 40 cents for an 80-gallon tank.

Charges to customers served under the "general power and light rate," and who use less than 2,114 kilowatt hours, will be increased in amounts ranging from 16 cents to $1.96 per month. Charges to larger power and lighting users, whose bills were previously increased by reason of coal cost provisions, will be slightly reduced.

Several minor changes are being made in rates and conditions for serving churches having large electric heating loads, with the overall adjustment designed to produce a better balance between the rates for various types of service, according to the company.

In announcing the new tariff, W. H. Doran, MEC president, said: "Since 1940 the company's cost of coal per ton has increased 108 percent. During that period the major portion of this increase has been paid by the larger power and lighting users through a monthly coal cost adjustment in certain of the company's rate schedules."

"No part of this increased cost has been borne by the residential and smaller lighting and power customers. The new rate schedules contain no fuel-price adjustment provision but are designed to distribute the increased coal costs among practically all customers."

The Second Term

Speaker of the House Joe Martin has expressed the confident belief that President Eisenhower will seek a second term in 1956, a belief shared by virtually all who have been students of the political picture in these United States through the years.

For, as Speaker Martin says: "I've never seen a President yet who didn't want a second term in office."

However, there are many elements to be considered in the political situation within the Republican party, some of which might well alter the willingness of Mr. Eisenhower to accept the nomination so generally assumed to be available to him.

Not the least of these, and one gnawing at the vitals of many an active member of the GOP, is failure of the President thus far to rid his administration of a great horde of Truman appointees, including many officials in policy-making positions who came into the last administration on a political basis and are still devoted to the Truman policies.

If the Republican administration is to strengthen the hand in the White House, say many members of Congress, Mr. Eisenhower will have to issue a presidential decree ridding himself of the termites representing so consistently the party voted out of office in 1952.

No one doubts the continuing popularity of President Eisenhower himself, but it has been amply demonstrated in Wisconsin and New Jersey that candidates require more than the Eisenhower hold on the public to win through to office.

This is what is concerning many a Congressman due to go before his district next year.

Gas Taxes

State governors and some other people say they want to get the federal government out of the gasoline and auto taxing business.

Their idea seems to be to reserve these tax powers exclusively to the states. Principal argument is that Uncle Sam picks up about $900 millions in revenue from these taxes, but he turns back to the states, in the form of direct highway aid, only about 65 per cent of this money.

The argument makes a certain amount of sense, since the states do most of the actual road building in this country.

The idea also fits in with the hope for a simpler tax system and less concentration of authority in Washington.

But it raises some practical questions which are bound to give Congress something to think about before consenting to such a proposal.

Repeal of the federal tax on gasoline would have the effect of abolishing the Federal Bureau of Roads.

More than ever, in the fact of a mounting volume of interstate highway traffic, the country needs modern, national motor arteries. It doesn't seem likely that the states, individually, would meet this problem even half-way without federal guidance and financial assistance.

Merely shifting the tax power is no answer.

The Once Over

—by H. I. Phillips

Joe Doakes' Declaration of Independence

When in the course of nearly human events it becomes expedient to dissolve the rules and regulations and to assume an attitude that the other fellow is always wrong for the opinion of mankind requires a Declaration of Independence of causes that impel a separation. We hold these truths to be self-evident:

1. That all men are created equal, but that some are more equal than others, all depending on the issue, the numbers involved and the TV screen speeches. That the equality of the innocent bystander is subject to cancellation without notice. That equality, so far as the general public is concerned, is strictly "for the birds," with the geese getting priority.

2. That all men hold certain inalienable rights (when, as and if), except as hereinafter noted and good only until punched. Among these rights are life, liberty and the pursuit of impatience, luxuries, more money and less work.

3. We hold that whenever any circumstance hampers these rights it is the right of any group to slam the door, hurry to the nearest mike, gun up the works, inconvenience his neighbor and deny there are two sides to every story. It becomes the duty of such groups to complicate the situation, add to the economic snafu, make it tough on the man next door, and institute new rules which seem to them more likely to affect their happiness.

The history of the American Way of Life is a history of persecution. To prove this, we cite these candid facts to the world:

The American economic system has made it difficult for us to have more than one car to a garage. It has made it hard to have a TV set upstairs and down. It has abolished the old iron stove, the washbub, the wooden icebox, the horse and buggy, the kerosene lamp, the 400-yard trip to the "Chic Sales," and the magic lantern.

We have been restrained in our pursuit of more than two semi-annual Florida vacations per year, the two-day week, better world tour literature, bigger road maps, larger dance halls, and more goose feathers in mattresses.

It has brought about an intolerable situation where now and then we encounter something that can't be done by pressing a button or turning a dial.

The American system has denied to us a station wagon in every family, government baby-sitting, Federal distribution of swimming pools and weekly repair of TV sets at state expense.

It has supplied us with only 50 times the security protection and help which our forefathers were afforded.

It has sent hordes of agents forth to aid us in owning our own homes; it has arranged for 25-year payments; it has made it possible for us to enjoy all the luxuries of life on the installment plan, but we are still without color TV sets.

These injustices being apparent, we solemnly declare all men free and discontented and entitled to a mediation board in every hassle. For the support of this Declaration we pledge our lives, the other fellow's fortunes and our growing sense of suspicion that the other guy is not giving us a square deal.

Now that President Eisenhower has proposed that all the big nations create a pool of fissionable materials and put scientists to work converting the atom bomb into the atom life saver, we suppose Pravda will accuse us of being "healthmongers."

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Murray were stuck up in their Park Avenue apartment and robbed the other night. They were too stunned to say, "Shall we dance?"

Robert S. Allen Reports

World Pool Of Food, Other Commodities Goal Of Ike

Washington — President Eisenhower is considering another history-making international pooling plan.

This one would deal with surplus food and other commodities.

The President will discuss the intriguing proposal with Republican congressional leaders during his series of conferences with them this week on the Administration's legislative program at the coming session.

Present plans call for including the commodity pooling concept in the (second) State of the Union message the President will lay before Congress next month.

As in the case of the uranium pool the President advocated in his electrifying speech before the United Nations, he would leave the details of the commodity proposal to the UN and Congress. He believes this method offers the best prospects for getting results on both projects.

At the same time, the President and his advisers have certain ideas on what should be done. But these will be submitted only when (if ever) such matters are considered. Otherwise nothing will be said about them.

The commodity pool, as discussed in White House councils, is exactly a two-fold plan.

One part relates to surplus food; the other to commodities, such as cotton, wool, flax, rubber, etc. Several of the President's lieutenants even go so far as to include tin, copper, lead, zinc and oil in a possible pooling list.

The Details — The President favors starting with the pooling and distribution of food, and later branching out into other commodities.

He feels the need for food is much more urgent throughout the world than for other items. Also, that a successful food project would greatly facilitate similar efforts with cotton, rubber, etc.

"The food pool concept developed out of the highly successful distribution of food packages to hungry East Germans."

At one time in the inner White House discussions, serious consideration was given to a proposal to make an outright offer of large quantities of American food surpluses to iron curtain countries, including Russia. Both the latter and its satellites are confronted with the worst food shortage since World War II.

However, in the end, this was dropped in favor of a UN food pool.

This plan has powerful support among Administration leaders, chief among them Agriculture Secretary Ezra Benson, Foreign Aid Director Harold Stassen and White House assistant C. D. Jackson, in charge of psychological warfare.

They are pressing the project as of great value both at home and abroad; in the former, as a sound method for dealing with the difficult problem of disposing of the pyramiding surpluses of farm products, and in foreign countries of meeting the widespread need for more food. In some areas, this need is so great as to amount to famine conditions.

The Administration leaders also argue that an effective food pool would be a tremendous weapon in countering Communist propaganda tactics.

Note: One key congressional leader will not attend the President's legislative conferences. The absentee is Representative Dan Reed (R., N.Y.), chairman of the potent House Ways and Means Committee, which originates all revenue measures. Reed sent word to the White House, he would not be on hand because of previous plans to take his wife on a vacation cruise to Panama.

War Deal — One American company supplied 60 per cent of all oil used in the Korean war.

It is the California-Texas Corporation, generally known as "Cal-Tex," and the petroleum came from its prodigious holdings in oil-rich Bahrain on the Persian Gulf. This information was uncovered by the House Interstate Commerce Committee, headed by Representative Charles Wiltverton (R., N.J.). The Committee is investigating oil prices in the U. S. and Middle East, and will publish a report next month after Congress convenes.

Punsters, front and center! Clifton Fadiman, pun-loving pundit, has selected for special mention a few outstanding examples of the ancient art. He heads his list with Groucho Marx's elephant hunting expedition. In Africa, grumbled the Grouch, he found the tusks very difficult to remove, but in Alabama, of course—Tuscaloosa.

Then there was the time George S. Kaufman got tangled up with the word "euphemism." He finally extricated himself by declaring, "Euphemism and I'm for youse'm."

It was Franklin P. Adams who pointed out, "Take care of your pennies, and the dachshaus will take care of themselves." Louis Untermeyer who dubbed composers plagiarizing from Debussy as "Debussybodies," and Christopher Fry who characterized a brilliant conversationalist as "coruscating on thin ice." Fadiman took the pun offensive again when he rhymed: "The pridelful term, about to be a mother, reflects that two good terms deserve another." Class dismissed!

George Sokolsky Says...

Perhaps We Should Apply To Point Four For Aid To Pay Judges Adequate Salaries

Ours is a profligate government which pours money into utilities all over the world but when it comes to those of our own officials whose very office requires dignity of manner, we become absurdly stingy.

I refer to Public Law 222, which covers the traveling expenses of Federal justices and judges, including the brethren of the Supreme Court, even the Chief Justice of the United States.

The grant for maintenance expenses actually incurred is $15 a day. I travel widely and constantly and cannot do it on $15 a day, unless I stay at a flop-house or a tenth-rate hotel. The lowest rate for hotel rooms that I have found in large cities is $6 a day; a really respectable room, where it is possible to receive a guest without sitting on a bed, in the same cities, runs between $10 and $12. I have not inquired whether special rates are made for government officials. Certainly little remains for food, pressing clothes after traveling, tips, telephone calls, and other incidentals.

It is amusing that the same Congress enacted a law creating a commission to study judicial salaries and gives to the members of this commission $25 per day in lieu of subsistence. Why does it cost a member of this commission more for expenses than the Chief Justice of the United States or even a circuit judge? It has become a practice to shift Federal judges from their home bases to other cities, often quite distant, to hear cases. Such a judge may be required to be away from home for a long stretch and should, if he so desires, have the advantage of the comfort of his wife. He should not be cooped up in a small room in a lonely hotel to read briefs under the most unsatisfactory environmental conditions. His position and services warrant not only a social dignity but satisfactory physical conditions. He should be able to meet men similarly well placed on a basis of equality.

It cannot be done on $15 a day, nor does the salary-scale of judges warrant expenditures out of their own pockets. Under the present penurious practices, judges must either be chosen from among those who have inherited wealth, or who, having accumulated savings in private practice, seek high honors, or among lawyers who are always in debt, borrowing to maintain a position but never being able to repay. The tiny estate of Chief Justice Fred Vinson was surely not an incentive to a young lawyer who hopes to make a career of the judiciary.

The commission investigating the subject is required to study, among others, the following: "The compensation or income currently earned by persons of comparable qualifications in labor, business, the professions, or other private pursuits; "The sacrifices involved in the acceptance of appointment to the Federal judiciary or of membership in the Congress; including in the case of members of the Federal judiciary the interruption of private practice at the time when it is most remunerative, and the necessity for divorcing oneself from outside activities which are productive of income.

"The interruptions to normal family life, resulting in the case of many members of the Federal judiciary from the necessity of holding court at points remote from their residences."

In connection with compensation of persons of comparable qualifications, the commission might look into the expense accounts of businessmen and labor leaders. They are sometimes more valuable than salaries.

No officials of our government are more important than our judges, particularly those of the Federal courts. Up a them truly depend our "life, liberty and pursuit of happiness." It used to be that while criticism of municipal and state judges was not unusual, the Federal judiciary was regarded as sacrosanct. That is not true today. Certainly since 1936, many men have been appointed to the Federal bench who do not belong there, either by training or temperament. Even some of the brethren of the Supreme Court have come in for criticism, the appointments being snooking-political for such a high office. Only the most competent and character-proven men in America should sit on the Supreme Court of the United States.

Our judges should be adequately paid; their expense accounts should be in consonance with their positions. If there is no money available for that, why apply to Point Four for aid?

She went out into the kitchen and, after a while, returned with my sandwich.

It was on WHITE bread instead of rye, had a lot of lettuce in it and NO butter.

But when the girl asked me whether "THAT" was what I wanted, I said "Exactly."

After the sandwich, I ordered a jelly doughnut. The waitress had recommended it. They baked them themselves, she said.

As I bit into the doughnut, jelly squirted all over my face and over a brand new sportshirt I wore for the first time.

That waitress was so accustomed to routine that probably her entire existence, at least for that day, was ruined.

Factographs My New York

—by Mel Heimer

New York — In the buses, the arguments began about whether the windows should be open. In the gutters, crumpled tissues, that had been wrapped around oranges, mixed with the dried leaves. The sky was dull and gray and streaky as if it had been finger-painted by a boy of three, and along the streets the young Irish girls looked pretty and wind-blown with the starves around their hair. Along the dark and rotting North river docks, the seagulls had the place to themselves; there were no lazy fishermen anywhere.

No one looked out the windows of the buses headed downtown along Riverside drive. If they had they would have seen the Painesides across the way, rusty and clear in the gray day, and they might have noticed for the first time the airline sign against the background of the amusement park roller coaster, "4 Hours to Miami." An old woman sat on a bench along the drive and looked unseeing out at the water, with the bare trees stretching over her head and before her like a charcoal frieze.

The pigeons still cluttered up the streets but they moved slowly, as if their blood had congealed. Here and there you saw men in old Navy peajackets and Army battle jackets, and invariably the men wearing them had cheap, worn, unshined shoes. The wind plastered scraps of a tabloid paper against a building and along the sidewalks men passed by with new, stiff gray felt hats, looking as absurd as men's stiff gray felt hats always do. Outside a garage at W. 110th street there was a sign: "Cars wanted for cash. No convertibles."

The children were the same, of course, but they always are. They whooped along, with only the sheepskin-collared canvas overcoats to say it was different. Central park had a kind of gray and canary-colored edge to it and seemed awash with squirrels bustling, sitting, staring. You noticed that the sanitation men wearing papers with nails on sticks wore gloves, and by the uptown boating lake, green-bottomed rowboats were piled atop one another, while a little breeze ruffled the water. Faces were paler except on Broadway, where the sun-tan machines go 24 hours a day.

On 97th street, a woman walked by, bent into the wind a little, holding her green velvet hat, and how long had it been, how many months, since you had seen that tableau? There seemed to be in the streets an endless stream of young men in jackets split at the back, gray flannel pants, cordovan shoes, black knit ties and somber men. Along Fifth Avenue in the 60s, a black cocker spaniel got caught up in and confused with a batch of leaves on the sidewalk, and in a playground near the Museum of Art three sea-saws lay desolately tilted to the ground, in neat order.

Boys passed by wearing gaudy silk warm-up jackets, with "CYO Clamps, 1952-53" on the back. In the theatres at night there was that Smell again, the overpowering, funeral aroma of expensive perfume. The dog-walkers were out again, tall thin women with Irish setters, fat housemaids with boxers—where had they been, all this while? There were autumn flowers planted all around the General Sherman monument, across the street from the Plaza, and they looked gaudy and out of place.

A new building was going up at 56th street and Fifth avenue, but none stopped to watch; no one seemed to have the time. On the corner near the Gotham hotel, a movie actor with thinning hair stood uncertainly, not sure which way to go, and he pulled his white topcoat closer around him. In the windows of bookstores, they were advertising Christmas cards. For months there had been guys throwing baseballs or rubber balls at each other at lunch hour, but now they were gone. Smoke from a hospital chimney zig-zagged crazily into the gray sky.

Autumn, fall—they could call it anything they wanted, but it was winter and it was here.

Sweet Potatoes Spilled On Street As Truck Overturns

Intersection of Morningside and Park Avenues, Stroudsburg, was the scene of another truck accident at 4 a.m. yesterday when a tractor-trailer failed to negotiate the curve and upset.

Driver, identified as Lonzy Holloway, 33, and the truck owner, Milton Ross, both of Paulsboro, N. J., escaped injury when the trailer, loaded with about 14,000 pounds of sweet potatoes, ripped loose from the cab and overturned.

Holloway told Stroudsburg police a car traveling south on Park Ave. cut the intersection too sharply, forcing him to the northeast curb as he headed toward Stroudsburg.

He said he gained control of the vehicle and pointed toward Morningside Ave. but the truck hit the curb there, jarring the trailer loose from the cab. The trailer spun around and upset, spilling part of its uninsured cargo over the area. Ross estimated the vehicle damage at over $2,000, excluding the cargo.

Scouts Note Member Gain

Executive board members, Delaware Valley Area Council, Boy Scouts of America met last night at the Penn-Stroud Hotel.

Officials predicted opening of the new bridge at Delaware Water Gap will make Camp Weygand more accessible to boys in troops throughout the area.

The camp is now in general use on weekends, the board said. Members of Troop 97—now largest in the area with 52 members—of Grace Lutheran Church, East Stroudsburg, spent a weekend at the camp recently, board members announced.

An increase in scout membership was noted for the Pocono District by Dr. Francis B. McGarry who said the district gained 37 members in 1953. Attending the meeting were Karl Miller, Easton, council president; Harry C. Remaly, council commissioner; John Brubaker, health and safety commissioner; Val P. Hatterman, organization and extension; Herman Hahn, camping activities; Dr. McGarry, Pocono District chairman; Earl F. Groner, chairman of the advancement commission; Walter S. Culpepper, scout executive and Ernest Hogan, deputy regional executive with headquarters in Philadelphia.

Mount Pocono Water Rates Raised

PUC Grants $4,600 Boost To Company

Mount Pocono—Public Utility Commission yesterday authorized Fairview Water Co. here to increase rates an estimated $4,600 yearly, starting Jan. 1, according to an Associated Press dispatch from Harrisburg.

None of the local officials involved had received any official notification of the PUC action last night.

Still unanswered is the question of whether a public hearing will be ordered on two formal protests filed by Borough Council here through its solicitor.

The water company serves 256 consumers in the Mount Pocono borough area. All but eight commercial and public users will be affected by the boost.

According to the solicitor's office, notice of the proposed rate increase was received by consumers in October.

About five weeks ago some 35 informal protests—letters from borough residents—were sent to Harrisburg.

About three weeks ago Borough Council filed formal complaint with PUC against alleged deficiencies in the water service. The solicitor also asked that a combined hearing be scheduled at which protests against both the service and the rate increase could be made.

PUC wrote the borough that if a hearing on rate increases were wanted, formal protests would have to be filed.

Council accordingly called a public meeting at the schoolhouse, Complaints and protests against the rate boost were compiled.

The formal protest was mailed to PUC last Monday.

The borough solicitor's office said council would "wait for official PUC notice of the rate increase authorization," and added that some indication would probably be received on whether a hearing was to be held.

A. J. Zabriskie, president of the water company, said last night he was gratified by the PUC authorization.

"When you're five years in arrears on interest, and interest (on bonds) has been cut to one and a half per cent from five per cent, a rate increase is absolutely necessary."

The increase, amounting to 50 per cent on the previous rates, does not apply to the borough school, fire company, nor railroad station, Zabriskie pointed out.

The townsmen of Fire Co.'s 15 members could do little but protect the Silas Haydt home, which stood about 50 feet from the flaming barn.

Mrs. Haydt told firemen she awakened about 2:30 a. m., saw dense clouds of smoke, and called her husband. He turned in the alarm.

The firemen arrived 25 minutes later with their single piece of firefighting equipment—a pumper—and hosed down the Haydt house.

Lost in the blaze were: Two dump trucks, a bulldozer, a grader, two combines, a cement mixer, tractor, a few power saws, a hay baler, three air compressors, 25 truck tires, road construction tools, a gooseneck trailer, 75 tons of hay and 8,000 bushels of potatoes.

Fire Chief Norman Beers said two firemen escaped injury by seconds. They were about to enter the 75-year-old structure when the flaming roof fell in.

Livengood said his loss was partially covered by insurance.

Blaze Causes $100,000 Loss

Firemen yesterday were investigating the $100,000 blaze which destroyed a barn-garage and contracting equipment of Mahlon Livengood, Kunkletown contractor, early Monday.

The townsmen of Fire Co.'s 15 members could do little but protect the Silas Haydt home, which stood about 50 feet from the flaming barn.

Mrs. Haydt told firemen she awakened about 2:30 a. m., saw dense clouds of smoke, and called her husband. He turned in the alarm.

County Gets $46,469 From Gas Tax Fund

Monroe County has received $46,469.42 in its semi-annual payment from the state liquid fuels tax fund, it was reported yesterday.

The allotment, the eighth installment under the state's annual allocation to local governments for road purposes, it was higher than that of Dec. 1, 1952, P. A. Rockefeller, county treasurer said.

Last year for the six-month period the county received $42,455.72. Payments in June are substantially smaller, Rockefeller reported.

Payment was certified by E. L. Schmidt, highway department secretary.

The legislation provides for $5,000,000 annual increase over the former total of $10,000,000 appropriated from the Motor License Fund.

Quarterly payments amount to $3,000,000 when all townships, boroughs and cities have complied with requirements of the act.

This represents annual payments of $12,000,000. The additional $3,000,000, when matched in an equal amount by local authorities, is allocated for work completed on approved construction projects.

Distribution of funds to the townships and boroughs is made upon application to the county commissioners, who decide how much money each political subdivision is entitled to receive.

Windows Help Beautify Old Or New Home

By DAVID G. BARETHIER
AP Real Estate Editor

How to make the most out of windows is the secret of many home modernization projects. Windows have evolved from mere necessities for admitting a minimum of light and air to a point where they now are major architectural and decorative features.

You are not likely to go wrong on windows when planning a new house or a remodeling project if you understand some of the various uses of modern glass areas.

You can use windows to change the architectural lines of your house as well as to frame views. The awning type window, for example, is attracting much attention in emphasizing horizontal lines of low and rambling houses.

This window gets its name from its horizontal frames that open outward and upward awning fashion. It offers controlled ventilation in all weather, since the panes shed water like little roofs.

This makes it possible to have a window opened farther than a casement window or double-hung sash window could be opened in the face of rain or snow. Other advantages are that the awning panes deflect air upward into a room and can be cleaned on both sides from indoors.

A new aluminum awning window is now being introduced (Lupton by Michael Flynn Manufacturing Co., Philadelphia) which features a new type of opening device.

A centrally operated and automatic locking control bar delivers equal power to both jambs of the window for easy opening and closing. The mechanism is concealed in the window frame so as not to interfere with venetian blinds. Vinyl plastic weatherstripping forms a tight seal around each awning pane.

Window walls have done much to inspire the development of new types of ventilating windows. Such large areas of glass extending from floor to ceiling involve extensive use of fixed panes, which cannot be opened. The picture window—usually consisting of one large single pane of plate glass—presents a similar ventilating problem.

One solution is to flank such fixed-pane windows with separate units which can be opened. The awning type fits into this scheme. So do casements, sliding windows and a top row of strip windows which open casement-wise. In some instances, ventilation is provided by louvers under fixed-pane windows with hopper style doors closing over the louver openings when ventilation is not required.

The invention of double-glazing in the form of two panes of glass sandwiching a sealed air space between them has been a big factor in popularizing fixed windows. Air conditioning has been another factor.

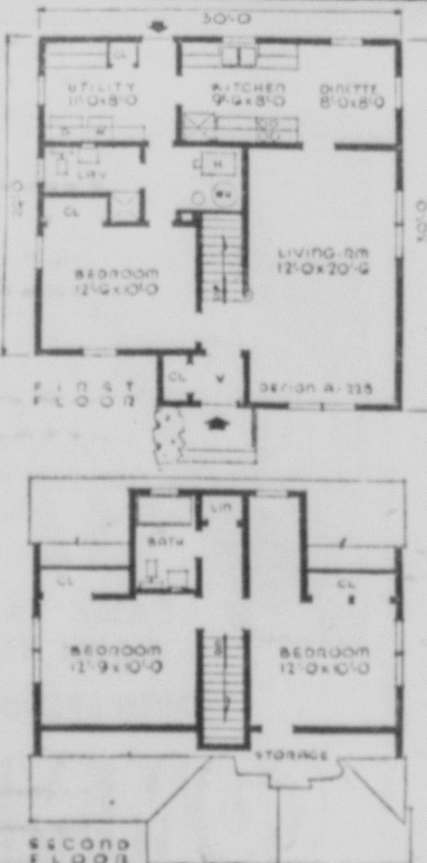

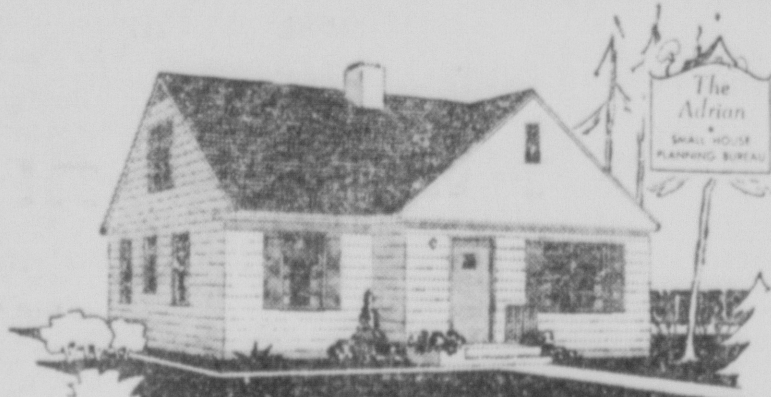

Although it is possible to have a house with all windows permanently sealed when year-round air conditioning is used, Cloud Wampler, president of the Carrier Corp., frankly admits that the public is not yet ready to accept that idea. He finds that women still want to open windows, admitting dust, in spite of the fact that air conditioning cleans and filters the air.

In planning window walls or picture windows it is prudent to remember that they draw a certain amount of kilbiting when you don't have enough land for privacy. When such windows are placed on the front of a house, or facing a neighbor's house, they inspire old saws about fishbells and framing pictures "looking in" instead of out.

But with proper landscaping and especially on the rear garden side of a house, window walls can merge the best of the outdoors with the indoors.

Rose, Green Good Kitchen Colors

A charming modern kitchen has a color scheme which combines two tones of rose with two tones of green. The floor is a rich rose-red. Walls and woodwork are enameled a soft, but glowing rose-pink. The white-painted ceiling matches the smooth-surfaced cabinets and equipment. Work surfaces are cool gray, edged with silver. The tops of the stools at the breakfast bar are a spring green to match the dishes. Curtains are a deeper, but harmonizing green.

Openings In Valances Reveal Fabric Colors

By Vivian Brown
AP Newsfeatures Writer

Why not put some windows in your drapery valances? These little peep-holes in the valance board provide charming frames for drapery fabric.

Before having your board cut, sewing center experts suggest cutting a paper pattern the exact window width desired plus the corner returns at each end. That way you can try different depths and proportions. Valances are usually from one-eighth to one-sixteenth the length of the drapes.

Line the valance material and draperies with a solid color coordinated to room furnishings so that a quick change-over in decor may be achieved by reversing the pieces.

The valance is the width of the window plus 1 inch for seam allowance. Allow three times depth of valance board plus one-half inch seams for pleated valance. Lining is cut to the same size.

Stitch material and lining right sides together leaving one end open 8 or 10 inches. Turn to right side and press. Slip-stitch section left open.

To lay valance pleats work from top, making each pleat about 2 inches deep. The second pleat overlaps the first one, about three-fourths its depth. The third pleat overlaps the second and so on until the entire piece is pleated. Stitch across each end to hold pleats.

Reversible draperies involve little more yardage and sewing time than simple drapery lining but there is a slight difference in the making of the draperies. Here are suggestions recommended by sewing centers:

To measure the width of a pair of draw draperies, measure your window from jamb to jamb. Then allow the window width plus one-half for the pair of draperies. Measure the length of window from the curtain fixture to sill or floor (depending upon desired length). Add to the length measurement 1 inch for rod, 2 inches for heading and 6 inches for top and bottom hems. Cut reversible side to identical measurements.

Make heading using crinoline backing for both drapery and lining. Place right sides of drapery and lining materials together and pin lengthwise edges together with pins across seams. Stitch both edges together from top down. Clip seam edges every three or four inches to prevent drawing and press seam open. Turn drapery right side out and press. Before completing draperies make pleats at top of draperies and also at top of lining. Finish heading by slip-stitching across the top to join the two draperies and also reinforce

Avoid Fashion When Building Family House

AP Newsfeatures

Galesburg, Ill.—Architect Edgar A. Payne advises homebuilders to avoid fashion and build homes that suit the family.

"If a young couple has individuality and the average amount of common sense, it will not put up a pattern house or a duplicate of the one next door," Payne said.

It is the same principle that there is no real lasting pleasure in the possession of a chrome, no matter how cleverly or handsomely named. Sameness renders any object common and distasteful, he said.

Payne figures following fashion in house design is foolish and as short-lived as fashions usually are. Fashions change rapidly and your ideal house soon becomes stale and out-dated. The only way to get a house thoroughly suitable is to study the habits, customs and needs of the family; then plan the house to suit.

The shape, color and form of a house define very closely the character, education and taste of its owners. In designing a house, Payne said, it is well to bear in mind one or two things—utility and beauty. In good architecture, these go hand in hand.

No ornamental feature should be put on a building unless it has reason for being there. It should be useful and indispensable to good construction.

Home means rest, quiet and simplicity. A house need not be bare and overly simple, but simplicity of design must be the keynote to follow.

Minimum Standards Set For Storage In Home

Just what storage space should you have in a new house, or will you have to have as your family grows? Experience has taught many homebuilders that the following, with little variation, is about the minimum for convenience.

Without this much space, you might as well decide to give away things not in use or build closeting to hold them.

One—An extra closet under the stairway.

Two—A linen closet in a room or closet.

Three—A wardrobe in a bedroom or attic. The latter is excellent for storing out-of-season garments.

Four—In the garage, a corner cabinet for garden tools.

Five—In the garage or basement, next-to-wall places for snow shovels and ice choppers.

Six—Any convenient place, a container for galoshes and rubbers.

Seven—A shed for bicycles. This could be a lean-to back of the garage.

Eight—At the summer cottage, a mouse-proof cabinet for bed linen and mattresses. Line it with metal screening.

Nine—For all those extra shoes which are worn only occasionally, a rack inside the closet wall or door.

If you would like your refrigerator to match the wall or trim, you can have it sprayed in the color you desire at an auto-painting shop.

Koren Given Contract For Housing Work

Tobyhanna — An East Stroudsburg firm has been awarded the contract to furnish spouting, siding, roofing and sheeting for the 200 housing unit development now under construction near the U. S. Signal Corps depot here.

Henry Koren, owner of Koren Home Improvement Co., 300 N. Courtland St., told The Daily Record last night he signed a contract with A. Kaplan & Son Ltd., general contractors, at their Englewood, N. J. office yesterday. The contract is for $33,000.

Located adjacent to the depot on the old parade ground site, the housing program was launched late in September by the Kaplan firm. Rinker and Kiefer, Stroudsburg, are the architect-engineers on the project.

Koren company, is expected to begin work next week, weather permitting. Alexander Kaplan, president of the contracting firm said about 75 percent of the foundations have been completed and the first homes are about ready for roofing. It was predicted earlier that the first homes will be ready for occupancy in May.

Under the present agreement between First National Bank of Scranton, Army Engineers and the Federal Housing Administration, $1,600,000 was advanced the Tobyhanna Village, Inc., a holding company set up for the Kaplan firm.

The agreement includes a 75-year lease with a 50-year recovery clause which would enable the government to take back the property after that period.

The development will provide houses for military personnel and custodial workers at the Signal Corps depot. The project will have 128 two-bedroom units, 24 three-bedroom units and 48 one-bedroom units.

Witnesses To Attend Assembly

Local groups of Jehovah's Witnesses will leave by auto this week to attend their three-day assembly in Tamaqua, Pa., Dec. 18-20. All sessions will be held in the Majestic Theater including a water immersion on Saturday.

More than a thousand ministers are expected to attend to hear and see various Bible discourses and demonstrations. The featured speaker, J. W. Stueffelen of New York, appears on the program all three days.

While all sessions of the convention are for public attendance, the witnesses will put forth strenuous advertising work to invite the public to Mr. Stueffelen's key talk at 2 p.m. Sunday on the subject, "What is your Destiny?"

Tiny Trees Carry Burden Of Christmas Cheer

Miniature Christmas trees, jeweled with sequins and tiny Christmas tree ornaments yesterday brought Christmas to the bedside of all the patients at the General Hospital as the gift of the hospital arrangement committee of the Monroe County Garden Club.

The miniature trees, designed by Mrs. A. H. Mathieson had been set in wax, sprayed with artificial snow and tied with a red ribbon by the committee which personally delivered them to the patients yesterday afternoon to last through the holiday season.

Sprays of Japanese yew, centered with gilded pine cones and Christmas balls were placed on the 15 nurses tables in the dining room and special Christmas favors were placed for the business office force, nurses, Grey Ladies and kitchen help.

A total of 110 Christmas favors were presented. The committee included Mrs. W. R. Erickson, chairman; Mrs. A. H. Mathieson, Mrs. Elwood Grant and Mrs. John Teisher.

Just Between Us

—By Bobby Westbrook

Get a group talking about the Christmases of their childhood and you'll have an animated group. Everybody remembers something special about Christmas.

The older women at the missionary meeting the other night were remembering when Christmas was devoted more to family activities than to family gifts—when the high point came with the lighting of the candles on the big tree in the church—when everybody helped string popcorn and cranberries and cut out paper lanterns and paper chains for the tree at home.

Nowadays, they say, the big question in children's minds is "What will I get for Christmas?" "What will we do on Christmas?"

And that's true—looking at it now and here. But when these children are grown don't you think that they, too, will be remembering not "the Christmas when I got my bicycle" but "Oh, that was the Christmas when Brother set a trap for Santa Claus and almost broke Daddy's leg?"

It will still be "Remember the Christmas the cat climbed up the tree and ate the Christmas cookies?" Gifts are wonderful to look forward to but it's still the family fun we'll be looking back on.

So let's relax the pressure a bit, shall we, in all this Christmas shopping. Ten years from now they won't remember whether you got the red one or the blue one, anyway, but they might remember how your eyes shone, and how happy everybody was that year.

—Listen To—
Bobby Westbrook daily, Monday through Friday, on "The Party Line" WYPO, 10:15 a.m.

BIRTHDAYS COME and birthdays go, but the young in heart need never worry. Here the camera catches Frank B. Frank B. Michaels At Party Marking His 80th Birthday

Frank B. Michaels, president of the Stroudsburg Security Trust Company, was last night on his 80th birthday honored by the people most closely associated with him at a testimonial dinner at the Penn-Stroud Hotel given by the directors and personnel of the bank.

John C. Warner, of Milford, president of the Pennsylvania Bankers' Association, was among the presidents of neighboring banks who attended the dinner. Others included Frank Stackhouse, T. J. Bretzweiser, Verner Reynolds and Donald Wade, of Matamoras.

Frank LaBar served as toastmaster at the program which featured a tribute to the guest of honor given by Rev. Ernest T. Campbell of the First Presbyterian Church of Stroudsburg.

Gerald Anderson presented the gift of the employees and Dr. Charles Flieger presented a portrait of Mr. Michaels, commissioned by the directors and painted by Robert Logan.

The program closed on a light note with magic tricks by State Senator Montgomery F. Crowe. Among the guests were Mr. Michaels' son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. George Weitzman, of Berlin, N. J.

The Married Couples Class of the Stroudsburg Presbyterian Church last night celebrated Christmas with an offering of $72.50, to be used by Monroe County Children's Clothing Inc., for the purchase of warm clothing for the children of Monroe County.

The meeting, with Russell Balmer, president, presiding, followed a Christmas supper at the church. Reports were given by Mrs. Elton Denning, secretary; and Mrs. Harold Lee, treasurer. The class also voted to contribute to the poinsettia fund for church decorations and shut-ins.

Arlington Williams, teacher of the class for the past twelve years, was presented with a library of the books of Elton Trueblood as the gift of the class with Frank Grimm making the presentation.

Mrs. Elton Denning gave a Christmas reading, "How Come Christmas?" and there were carols with Earl Willhoite as pianist.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Stevens, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Marley and Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Allegar were hosts at the supper, and the tables were decorated with cotton Santa Claus and greens.

The four basic components required for the reproduction of recorded music are:

1. The phonograph pickup
2. The amplifier
3. The reproducer (loud speaker)
4. The speaker housing

Each of the above components must be capable of a response of 15,000 CYCLES OR ABOVE. If any single or as a present falls short of this response, there can be no HIGH FIDELITY reproduction. For example, no matter how excellent the response of the amplifier may be, if the range of the speaker used is no more than 10,000 cycles, High Fidelity reproduction is impossible, regardless of whether one, two, four or twelve speakers are used in the instrument. Similarly, if both amplifier and speaker are capable of 15,000 cycle response and the pickup is incapable of a 15,000 CPS response, High Fidelity cannot be achieved. To summarize, HIGH FIDELITY reproduction is possible only when the basic components all POSSESS THE VITAL HIGH FIDELITY CHARACTERISTIC—RESPONSE UP TO 15,000 CYCLES OR ABOVE.

Christmases Of Other Years Are Recalled

The true observance of Christmas was the theme of the readings given at the December meeting of the Missionary Society of St. John's Lutheran Church, in Stroudsburg. The older members told of the old-fashioned Christmases when the emphasis was on family activity rather than on family gifts.

Mrs. G. Alvin Shook was re-elected president of the society; Mrs. William Marean, vice president; Mrs. Clarence Weiss, treasurer and Mrs. Raymond Rupert, secretary. Miss Mary Jane Shupp was welcomed as a new member.

Christmas refreshments including a colorful salad were served after the meeting by Mrs. John Blair, Mrs. Ida Heller, Mrs. Thomas Fellecker, Mrs. Ida Kunkle and Mrs. P. N. Wohlsen.

BACKSTAGE WARM-UP. Teachers and students gathered at East Stroudsburg Junior High School auditorium last night to stage their final rehearsal for the annual "Community Christmas Concert". Principals in photo above were doing an impromptu version of Irving Berlin's "White Christmas" for benefit of early comers. Shown are, left to right, Gilbert Dunning, Clair Hughes, Mrs. Melva Reid, Elizabeth Rosenberg, Bernina Hostetter and Shirley Darr. Last three named are students; Dunning is a senior English instructor assisting in staging; Miss Hughes is vocal music instructor for boys schools and Mrs. Reid is a junior high instructor who is assisting in staging the event. Concert will be presented tonight at 7:30 in the junior high auditorium. All residents are invited to attend. Mood of the concert itself, Miss Hughes said, is generally serious, in contrast to the informality of the photo. In featured spots will be the girls chorus, boys chorus, mixed chorus and ensemble; vocal solos and special instrumental numbers, including an organ and trumpet duo. Tonight's program is the third such Christmas concert. It is co-sponsored by the Exchange Club and the East Stroudsburg Ministerium. (Daily Record Photo)

Nearly $7,000 Contributed In Christmas Seal Drive

With only ten days remaining before Christmas—the day when the 1953 Christmas Seal closes—2,869 Monroe County residents still have not returned the purchase money for their seals.

According to Carl T. Secor, president of the Monroe County Tuberculosis and Health Society board, a total of 4,237 letters had been received as of last night.

The 4,237 Monroe residents who have returned their envelopes have contributed $6,909.77 to the $8,500 goal for this year. This leaves $1,590.23 still to be collected before the goal is met.

Residents who have not returned their Christmas Seal envelopes—with the money they wish to contribute—are urged to do so immediately.

The funds collected through sale of Christmas Seals are used to help locate tuberculosis and to educate the public in the diagnosis and treatment of the disease.

Prompt return of the purchase envelopes is necessary because the Christmas Seal sale should be completed no later than Christmas Day.

It is estimated that the islands of the earth include about four million square miles.

Pocono Fights Back From Early Defeat To Down Chestnuthill

Possinger Tops Parade Of Points

Brodheadsville — Pocono High school fought back from the brink of defeat last night to score a 40-38 basketball victory over Chestnuthill High, here on the latter's home hardwood.

Chestnuthill scored a 25-28 verdict over Pocono in the junior varsity encounter.

The host club took a commanding lead right off the bat in the varsity event, as the two arch Monroe County League rivals matched ability in a pre-season tussle that doesn't figure in the circuit standings.

Chestnuthill swept to a 14-4 advantage in the first period and increased its lead to 24-11 at half-time, with a 10-7 scoring bulge in the second stanza.

Big Spurt

Pocono, after a locker room chat with Coach Harry Wertheimer, fought back to dominate the third period, and enter the last quarter in the shoot end of a 28-27 score. The visiting blue and white clad Pocono club actually won the game in the last period, with a 13-10 edge.

Both teams made eight of 18 shots from the foul line, while Pocono held a 16-15 edge in field goals.

Harry Possinger, Chestnuthill guard, was the top point producer in the game with 25 points, on nine goals from the floor and seven from the foul line. Six members of the Pocono club divided the scoring, with Bob Hallet and Tom Williams leading the way with eight markers each.

Roan's 31 Points Fail Against Stags

Newfoundland — Greene-Dreher High school accounted for its fourth victory in five outings this season last night with a 63-54 decision over Barrett High, here on the winning contingent's home floor.

The Stags enjoyed a perfect night by winning the junior varsity encounter between the two schools, 31-30, but only after a nip-and-tuck battle.

Although Greene-Dreher finally won out by nine points, the home town fans had a few moments in the first period, as the visiting charges of Coach Joe Murray jumped off to an 8-1 lead right off the bat.

Scoring

Greene-Dreher settled itself midway in the first round and finished the period on the long end of a 17-12 count and reached the halfway mark with a 34-27 advantage.

The Stags continued to roll in the third period, despite the brilliant shooting of Barrett's Roger Roan, who wound up scoring 31 points. Bob Lupcho found the range for 23 points, as he paced the Greene-Dreher throughout the contest, including a 15-10 edge in the third round.

Greene-Dreher held a 15-point advantage late in the last period, but Barrett rallied to reduce it to nine at the final whistle.

Barrett made good on 18 of 39 shots from the foul line, while Greene-Dreher found the range on only 19 of 42 charity tosses.

Seven members of each team broke into the scoring column.

Old Timers, Faculty Release Rosters For Tuesday's Tilt

Playing rosters for the Old Timers and Faculty cage machines were released last night, as the two teams prepare for the second of three outings to take place on the Stroudsburg High court next Tuesday.

Next Tuesday's program will feature a tripleheader basketball attraction, sponsored by the Alumni Varsity "S" Club. Proceeds from the program will be used by the Varsity "S" Club to aid in financing its annual Spring athletic banquet.

Scranton Gives Up Eastern Loop Franchise

Williamsport (AP) — Thomas Richardson, president of the Eastern League, last night announced the return of the Scranton franchise to the league and said the class "A" circuit would operate in 1954 with eight teams.

Allentown was given a franchise after the 1953 season closed and the league had been considering expanding to 10 clubs if Scranton interests found sufficient financial backing to run again next year.

The league's board of directors at a meeting three weeks ago gave the Scranton club until yesterday to secure the necessary major league backing but it was unsuccessful.

Lost Money

Scranton, operating as a community financed venture in 1953, lost money and President Joseph Casey said he did not think it would be possible to operate without major league help.

The league will open a 140 game schedule April 21 with September 6 as closing day. Last season the Eastern tried a 154 game schedule but found it undesirable, Richardson said.

Allentown, a former member of the Inter-State League, will operate as a St. Louis Cardinals farm club. Other teams in the league are Reading, Williamsport and Wilkes-Barre, Pa.; Albany, Elmira, Binghamton and Schenectady, N. Y.

Lehighton Rolls Over Polk, 75-40

Kresgeville — Polk High school suffered its fifth straight basketball reversal of the season here on its home court last night when the bigger and older Lehighton Sports Shop scored a convincing 75-40 decision over the Polk pupils of Coach Art Smith.

The Lehighton Sports Shop junior varsity quintet also took the measure of Polk's yearlings in the preliminary tussle, 52-27.

Too Strong

Polk was never able to combat the strength of its vastly more experienced opposition and the home team finished on the long end of a 26-1 score at the end of the first period. Polk came back to hold a 10-8 advantage in the second period, but the home team trailed at halftime, 34-11.

Lehighton made certain of victory with a 26-10 advantage in the third period, even though Polk had the better of the going in the final round, 19-15.

Polk made four of eight shots from the foul line, while Lehighton on nine of 16 attempts from the same distance.

Roy Serfass led the Polk attack with 16 points.

Former Yankee President Dies

Port Chester, N. Y. (AP) — Edward G. Barrow, 85, who as general manager built the New York Yankee baseball empire, died last night.

In retirement since 1947, he had entered United Hospital July 7 suffering from a malignancy. He had been in a coma in November, rallied slightly and became worse over the weekend. He died at 8:35 p. m.

A huge figure of a man who once posed an exhibition with John L. Sullivan and made "Babe" Ruth back down from a fight, Barrow had watched his body waste away in recent years because of illness.

Yet his mind remained sharp and his baseball enthusiasm keen to the end.

Active Fan

He continued to attend games at Yankee Stadium until last Summer when he had to content himself with watching them on television from his Port Chester home.

Barrow served as business manager, general manager and president of the Yankees for 26 years, taking over the presidency upon the death of Col. Jake Ruppert.

During that period the Yankees won 14 American League pennants and 10 world championships.

He changed the late home run king, "Babe" Ruth, from a pitcher to an outfielder and discovered Hans Wagner, whom to the end he contended was the greatest baseball player who ever lived.

Barrow, known as "Cousin Ed" to his intimate friends, retired as president of the club in 1946 after a syndicate headed by Larry MacPhail bought the American League club. He remained one year as chairman of the board of directors and disposed of his stock for $300,000.

He was elected to baseball's Hall of Fame just before the last World Series. Although it wasn't generally known, he came close to being named commissioner of baseball after the death of Judge Kenesaw Mountain Landis in 1944.

Tavern Talks

Picture of the world's best listener at work

How many times have you chuckled over stories about people telling their troubles to the man behind the bar?

There's some truth mixed in with the humor. People do tell their troubles to him. And when they do, more likely than not, they find that a lot of problems answer themselves.

But the point is, the man behind the bar is an understanding listener—friendly, prone to recommend what's right. He proves that, by the way, every time he recommends Ballantine Ale and Beer—one reason so many of his customers listen to his suggestions about other things.

Barrett YMCA Branch Rejects Project Bids

Mountainhome — The board of governors of the Barrett branch of the Monroe County YMCA, meeting at the Barrett Friendly Library building Monday night, rejected the bids for changes and alterations to the proposed new quarters.

The board, presided over by Rev. Harold N. MacMurray, voted to ask for new bids in the hope of getting more favorable prices, it was announced.

After a thorough discussion of the bids, a motion was unanimously adopted rejecting those submitted and stipulating that bids be requested for a general contractor covering general construction, including all work in the building, plumbing, and heating, sewage disposal and electrical work.

The bids are to be opened publicly Monday night, Jan. 11, and, if approved by the board, the contract will be awarded to the lowest responsible bidder. This is subject to approval of the directors of the Monroe County Assn., the parent group, at their meeting in Stroudsburg Tuesday, Jan. 12.

The Barrett board also voted to have the lease for the proposed new headquarters with the Mountainhome Methodist Church, finally submitted and approved before the bids are opened. The frame structure was donated to the congregation by S. S. Kresge.

In addition to facilities for operation under the Y program, living quarters will also be provided for the local director, Carlton C. Chopp.

A delegation of members of the board of directors from the Monroe County Y was on hand at the meeting, having made the trip to take action in the matter of approval in the event contracts were awarded. However, this was obviously due to the rejection of the bids.

Those in the Stroudsburg delegation were: Dr. J. F. Noonan, chairman of the local building committee; C. A. Keiper, A. F. Everitt, Edward C. Hess, Earl F. Groner, Cliff Gillam, Holt Wyckoff, Mrs. Clifford Heller, Glen Sanborn and John R. Wilson, general secretary. Rev. MacMurray is also a member of the local board.

Couple Buys Home In Ross

A Ross Township dwelling has been sold by Domenick C. Falcone, Roseto, according to deeds recorded yesterday at the Courthouse.

Grantees were Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd B. Mackes, Saylorsburg RD1.

Mr. and Mrs. George A. Barry, East Stroudsburg, et al., have transferred to Mr. and Mrs. James C. Weaver, Willow Grove, Pa., a Middle Smithfield property consisting of two tracts on the road from Resica to Clark's Corner.

Elks To Observe Old Clothes Night

Old clothes night will be observed at the meeting of East Stroudsburg lodge of Elks at 8 p. m. Thursday, Exalted Ruler A. A. Lauffer.

Members are required to dress in clothing that has been outmoded or worn out. In the event a member fails to comply, a modest fine is imposed.

The entertainment committee has provided a special program for the night and a special hot platter will be served immediately following the regular lodge session.

Correct Address Of Couple Given

Condition of Michael Rehm, seven-months-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Marshall Rehm who was reportedly bitten by a rat Sunday, is listed as improved.

The child is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Marshall Rehm who live on Beers St., in the rear of W. Main St., Stroudsburg. Originally the address had been given as 1196 W. Main but last night the location was reported as Beers St.
